Raining Angels

It's raining angels on my face for every foot I pace,
a new life's dream is what I chase.
Like tears from the skies,
they fall to earth upon my green and blurred eyes.
There's an angel cleaning my dirty skin,
from inside out,my soul within.
I am guided by an angel's hand,
as i walk the streets of west ENGLAND,
I no longer sit,now I stand.I'm free at last,I've won back my voice.
And it wasn't by luck or the roll of a dice,

I was destined to find my paradise.
The roads of Devon I now roam,
i have found heaven, I've made it home.
My earthly body is on a lease,
I've got peace of mind,my mind's at peace.
Never again will I ever stray,
until my last breath,my dying day.
So it rains no more as I look to the skies,
with hearts and wings,the angels no longer cry.
Now they sing and they rejoice

Two Free Services- the Library and the Burton Art Gallery

The public library has been with us for over a hundred years. Although as a librarian I'm biased, I still believe that it offers something very rare these days - not just books, free to all, but also companionship, community links and friendship. Without sounding too trite the library offers stability in a changing world It's a place where if you like you can stay all day, reading, browsing the newspapers, keeping warm, using computers, discovering new facts - and it costs NOTHING . Where else can you do this without someone trying to sell you a product?

This is just a small sample of what's on offer.....

Up to 12 books can be borrowed for three weeks- longer if you renew them- costing nothing (except a small fine if you are late returning them)

Hire of CDs and DVD for a small charge, but free spoken word loans or cd loans if you are disabled Access to any books in the County system (50 libraries to choose from) or out of County for that hard to track down, out of print book

Free Internet access and access on your own home computer to on-line reference sources like Newsbank and Encyclopedia Britannica (If you come into the library you can also access the family history site Ancestry free of charge). Access at home to the on line catalogue where you can reserve books of your choice.

We'll give you a funky new library card with a key fob, a smart 'welcome' pack and a smile. For more details contact your local library on these numbers

NEWS FROM THE BURTON ART GALLERY FOR JULY

The William Hogarth Exhibition leaves the Gallery on 2nd July, so if you have not yet visited, make a special attempt to take in Hogarth's cynical, but humorous view of 18th century life in London – the Rake's Progress from riches to Bedlam.

Roger Copple is the founder of The Hero Manufacturing Company, and has been producing hand made toys since the early 1980s. He won an Award Status from the Design Council, and is a member of the British Toymakers' Guild. You will find some of his most popular creations in the Craft Gallery until 18th July.

The Westward Ho! & Bideford Art Society is well known in our area, and far beyond, for the high standard of art work in its annual exhibition. Once again, this will be borne out by the quality and content of paintings, sculpture, prints, ceramics and textiles by artists from the South West, as the reputation of this Society, founded in 1922, continues to attract the best in their field. The exhibition begins on 10th July, ending on 8th August.

The Friends of the Burton Gallery arrange events throughout the year for all the next one being 21st July in the Burton Workshop, 'Aspects of Photography', an illustrated talk by Paul Milsom, tutor at the Bideford Arts Centre. Bring your own camera if you need advice. Start time is 7.30 p.m. and admission is £5. To book, phone 01237 471455.

The Cafe du Parc will feed you; the Museum will give you an insight in Bideford's history; the Ceramic Collection will inspire you to be creative; the Tourist Information Centre will help you to enjoy North Devon; the Shop will provide you and your family with books and playthings, and when you have seen it all, you can have a pleasant walk in Victoria Park, one of the very best in the area, family friendly and free. Have a good Summer Diana Warmington

Two Bideford Soldiers from World War 1

Recently at our local history society meeting, here in Netley Abbey, Hampshire, we had a talk about the First World War (WW1). Afterwards my wife Betty spoke to the lecturer about a distant relative, who enlisted early, at 15 years old and who was killed at the battle of Loos on Saturday 25 September 1915, when he had just turned 16 years we understand. This very knowledgeable gentleman said he would research the name and report back to her. In a few days he was able to tell us that William Lewis May, a Bideford lad, had joined the 8th Battalion of the Devonshire regiment and was killed in action during the attack on the Breslan Trench, on the first day of the Battle of Loos. Further, thanks to the kindness of Betty's aunt Lily, formerly of Westleigh, we are in possession of his medals and death plaque, together with a more detailed account of his last battle.

It was also suggested that, as we live very near a WW1/ WW2 Military Cemetery here in Netley Abbey we might like to visit the grave of another Devonshire Regiment casualty Private J Walling, who died on 24 September 1916 and who also came from Bideford.

The Military Cemetery at Netley Abbey was a part of the largest Military Hospital ever built to care for the wounded and sick of the wars being fought by our troops abroad. Opened in 1863 as a direct result of Queen Victoria's insistence that her soldiers fighting for her abroad, should have proper and better hygiene and treatment, as more soldiers were dying of disease and poor treatment than in battles, it was claimed. At this point Florence Nightingale became involved, and was asked to suggest how this new Military Hospital might be built to take into account the above problems. It seems however that not too much notice was taken of her suggestions because the hospital buildings were too advanced in construction for them to be incorporated. The Royal Victoria Military Hospital played a major part during WW1 and WW2, but was allowed to become derelict, finally being demolished in 1966. All that is left is the Chapel building, now a visitor centre and viewing tower.

We wonder if any of J Walling's relatives still live in Bideford. We already know those from William Lewis May's family; as they may like to know that on the very few occasions each year we walk around the war graves, we pause at Pte. Walling's headstone, just for a quiet moment with him.

Wings- flying high in Bideford

Tucked away in the winding narrow street Lower Meddon street is the base of local youth charity 'Wings'. This unassuming building is a hive of activity for the town's young people- on Wednesday and Thursday evenings its doors are open for 'The Source'- a youth club-cum-cyber cafe for years 7-8 (Thursday) and 9 upwards (Wednesday).

But it's more than just a drop-in for kids. Since its inception ten years ago, Wings has grown considerably, and is now a large organisation catering for hundreds of young people in the area. Café nights are now more than just a place to chat to friends and check your emails.

"We formed a dance group, some nights there's even a nail bar for the girls and there's even a multimedia production suite" Sally Ellis, volunteer and recruitment manager told me. "We listen to what our young people want, and try to provide it."

Beyond that, Wings has created courses for 16-24 year olds who are out of work, including in mechanics and construction, based at a renovated barn in Abbotsham. Many of the courses are accredited, but Sally told me it's not just about practical skills.

"All of the courses include the development of life skills, as these are often just as important."

Previous projects have involved environmental conservation, including one project which involved over a hundred people planting trees. "We try to listen to the needs of the community," she said.

So what drives the staff at Wings? The founding members of staff are a group of local Christians, who responded to a request for a place for young people to meet. Their website states that Torridge is one of the most deprived areas in the region, but Sally is optimistic.

"Wings is all about giving young people a hope and future," she said. "And that is at the heart of everything we do."

Looking ahead to the summer, Wings has several events going on, including screenings of World Cup matches at the café. Year 6 students are invited to Bideford College on 26th July to find out what Wings has in store for the summer.

What's more, eight of the staff are attempting to swim the Channel in July to raise money for the charity. To donate, visit www.justgiving.com/big-swim .

For more information about Wings, you can contact them on 01237 472000. A short film about their practical courses is also available. Tom Collins

A New Bideford Sustainability Group

There was an initial meeting of the Bideford Sustainability Group on Wednesday, 16th June. About 20 people have expressed an interest in promoting more sustainable living in the town. It's still very early days and, clearly, there are so many different directions we could go in. What we can do and how to go about doing it will be up to those of you willing to 'get stuck in'.

There's so much we could do but only a limited amount of time and energy. How about coming along to the next meeting and helping to make a difference? The idea is to promote 'greener' living, save money and have fun doing it! For further information, date of next meeting, etc. email Stuart Fuller on : stuart.fuller454@btinternet.com

'Fancy making some dough?' Bread plea from Farmers' Market

Where have all the breadmakers gone? That's the plea from Hartland Farmers' Market.

The market lost its last bread stall at the beginning of the season when Sargie's Cornish Kitchen moved on to bigger things after their pudding lines were picked up by major supermarkets. Since then market organiser, Rod Landman, has been scouring the South West for someone to pick up the baton.

Rod said, "We know it's very difficult for anyone to make a good profit just from bread these days as the margins are so low. That said, anyone who has ever brought bread to the market has sold out really quickly, and our customers are crying out for a good loaf. Bearing this in mind I am prepared to offer a good discount on our usual traders' rate if someone wants to have a go. This could be an excellent opportunity for someone just starting out in business and someone wanting to take a punt on extending their range. Get in touch and we'll talk."

As well as the stall discount a good regular order from the market café is guaranteed as its policy is to buy all its ingredients from market stallholders wherever possible. Rod points out, "This would mean a minimum order from us of six loaves and 30 rolls at every market."

The next market is on July 4 at the Parish Hall in Hartland. Even without the bread you can buy the best local meat, poultry and game, vegetables (including organic), eggs, pies and pickles, pates and preserves, ice cream, fair trade produce, cakes, plants and flowers, biscuits, cheeses, meringues and cake . . . and there's always something there to surprise you. Markets will continue to run on the first Sunday of the month through to October, 10am – 1pm.

The markets continue to raise money for the Small School, and offers fund-raising opportunities to other local charities. To talk to Rod about the market call him on 01237 441 786.

Read, Scene, and Heard – The best picks from your local library this month

Read

'The Flesh Tailor', by Kate Ellis

Kate Ellis, one of my favourite crime writers, cleverly links the past and the present in her books. 'When Dr James Dalcott is shot dead in his cottage it looks very much like an execution. And as DI Wesley Peterson begins piecing together the victim's life, he finds that the well-liked country doctor had been harbouring strange and dramatic family secrets. (from website) The plot also features an old farmhouse in South Devon now undergoing gentrification by two ex Londoners. Bodies are discovered in the grounds and a sinister link is found between these and a group of evacuees who occupied the house in the 1940s. As usual a gripping read and unusually for me I did not guess the murderer until the last chapter. Recommended RA

Scene

A Single Man (DVD)

The story of a despondent George (Colin Firth) struggling to come to terms with the loss of his longtime partner. We follow him through a single day where a series of events and encounters ultimately leads him to decide if there is a meaning to life. Colin Firth gives an awesome performance. Quite simply a triumph and the stuff of great movies.

The Book of Eli (DVD)

Post apocalyptic action film as Eli (Denzel Washington) walks alone on a mission he doesn't fully understand, to deliver a book to a place of safety. Thrilling, with a good build up of tension and excitement which finally climaxes with a couple of cracking twists. Worth a watch.

Heard

Brother – Boyzone

Following the tragic death of bandmate Stephen Gately, this is their first recording as a four-piece. Emotional and introspective, this is a great album. A fitting tribute to the talented and sadly missed Gately.

Love never dies – Andrew Lloyd Webber

Probably the most anticipated music of the millennium, being the sequel to The Phantom of the Opera. It is very clever at subtly developing themes from the original, but not using obvious melodies. The singing is superb and the orchestrations lush. Some negative reviews coming through, but just listen with an open mind.

Messrs R Dymond and son of Bideford have inaugurated their Observation Motor Car Service from Bideford to Bude, running on Mondays and Thursdays. The 26 mile run is over good roads with ever changing scene of well wooded dale and rolling moorland with Lundy island and occasional peeps of the Bristol Channel. Leaving the Royal Hotel Bideford at 10.30am after the arrival of the train from Exeter, the journey to Bude is completed by about 10' clock and the return is at 5o'clock. The char-a-banc used is built in order that passengers at the rear have as good a view as those in the front and accommodates 26 passengers.

North Devon Record Office

One of the many new collections deposited recently in the North Devon Record Office consists of a bundle of miscellaneous papers of the Bideford Highway Board. This body was one of many such organisations established around the middle of the nineteenth century to administer the construction and maintenance of the growing rural road network, and the boards were really the forerunners of the comprehensive district council network introduced at the end of that century. The papers include correspondence, plans, posters and agreements covering the period 1875-1886. Many items are written by the Bideford Highway Board's surveyor in chief, John Turner. He appears, aged 31, along with his wife Elizabeth and their children, in the 1881 Census living at Northway, Parkham. Work for the Highway Board took him to Abbotsham, Alwington, Buckland Brewer, Bulkworthy, Clovelly, Hartland, Landcross, Monkleigh, Newton St Petrock, Parkham, East & West Putford, Welcombe and Woolser. The papers complement another substantial deposit of records from the Bideford Highway Board, which includes surveyor's reports, wages books, stores accounts and labourers' contracts, as well as John Turner's own exercise book on land surveying from his time as a teenage scholar at Chulmleigh Academy (ref. 3721A/F1). The elaborately decorated title page from that book is shown here. If you would like further information please visit our website at

Wikepedia An invaluable, continually updated and reviewed encyclopaedia

Dictionary As well as standard and specialised dictionaries there's a clever little programme that lets you select a word and it instantly brings up a definition and Wikepedia entry

Website There are programmes which let you easily create your own website I made mine with my own domain name for just £3.50 a month

Entertainment BBC iPlayer is useful for downloading missed TV programmes .

Forums On anything and everything. They come up on Google Search too. I once googled 'how to remove lily pollen stains?' It took me to a forum where someone suggested 'pulling' it off with blue tack. It worked!

Comments There's usually a place to comment at the end of articles, blogs, videos. Some of these comments are incredibly abusive, unhelpful or cynical. I enjoy trying to counter this with more positive and encouraging comments of my own. I hope I've inspired you to dip a toe into the amazing world of the Internet. And of course there's Ebay, Facebook, Twitter, dating, music, sports, stocks, games which I haven't even mentioned! In case you're wondering - I do have a 'real-life' as well! The internet simply enhances it.

European Health Insurance

Having booked a holiday in Europe for the first time in several years, I needed to apply for EHIC (European Health Insurance Cards) to replace the outdated E111.

Investigating whether I could apply online, I "Googled" EHIC and, as it was the first on the list of Google options, I chose to go to the ehic.org site. Yes I could complete an online form for the two of us and it would cost £9.95.

Now, somewhere in the back of my mind I was sure that this insurance is free to UK residents, so I tried another site - ehic.co.uk. This takes you to exactly the same site as ehic.org where you have to pay. So I tried the www.direct.gov.uk site and followed the links to "Apply Online" for EHIC.

Sure enough it is free.

So, if you are applying for EHIC, please make sure you do it through the official UK Directgov site and don't pay these other people who want to charge. Not only will they take your money, they will then possess your name, address, phone number, email address, details of the account you have used to pay them and your National Insurance Number!!! This must be a lucrative business as the internet address ehic.com is on sale. Price: US$4875. By the way, if you don't want to do it online, EHIC is also available from the Post Office. Mike Dunton
