RSPCA shop – our 'love your town' winners.

I have been working as shop supervisor for almost a year now and in this time I have constantly moaned about how scruffy the shop looked from the outside. People regularly walk past the shop and say we don't go in there as it's really scruffy, and not giving the inside a chance.

Although when they do come in, with the help of the team of volunteers, we have completely re-organised the inside as well, hanging and altering many things.

We finally got the chance to have the outside painted and had many quotes, but unfortunately it was a cost issue. Then two lads offered to do the painting for nothing, as we were a charity. They then went about transforming the outside to how it is now. Everyone was so pleased with the result.

Our shop tries not only to charge realistic prices, but good quality items as well. There is always a really good and happy atmosphere in the shop and we always try to make everyone feel welcome from the young to the old and from the regulars to the visitors. Being an RSPCA shop, the dogs are always welcome and most of them know that we keep a good supply of biscuits behind the counter for them. Tracy Blake

GREEN MATTERS

There are two things to talk about under the Green Umbrella this month - and given the weather as I write this, the term is an apt one!

Firstly, the "Global Day of Doing" on the 10th October, 2010 (10:10:10), is calling on us all throughout the world, individually or in groups, to do something to reduce our 'carbon footprint' on that day. From kids in 10,000 schools planting trees across Russia and Croatia, to solar panels being fitted on world leaders' homes, to a music festival supporting 10:10 here in the UK and couples holding low-carbon weddings; the diversity of actions is amazing.

If you're an individual doing just one thing for 10:10:10, why not have a low-carbon lunch with family or friends and use the opportunity to get them to join 10:10 at www.1010global.org. There's some really useful information on how to source food locally and prepare it with minimal energy on this website.

Secondly, the Brigit Strawbridge Talk on 13th September. Brigit managed to hold the interest of her audience of over 50 for a whole hour, which is an achievement in itself! She began by giving us an overview of her own development as an environmental campaigner and activist before focusing on her evolving passion - bees! Did you know there are many different species of bee? I can now refer to 'honey bees', 'black bees', 'solitary bees', 'red mason bees' - the list is seemingly endless. Interestingly, masts for mobile phones, gm crops and neonicotinoids in seeds appeared alongside loss of habitat and pesticides, as possible causes for the death of bees. However, rather than emphasise the devastating consequences of the loss of our bee population, Brigit focused on positive ways in which we can promote their survival and help them to flourish. Rabbit Stew and a Penny or Two
Maggie Smith-Bendell
£5.99

Born in a Somerset pea-field in 1914, the second of eight children in a Romani family, Maggie Smith-Bendell has lived through the years of greatest change in the travelling community's long history. As a child, Maggie rode and slept in a horse drawn wagon, picked hops and flowers, and sat beside her father's camp fire on ancient verges, poor but free to roam.

As the twentieth century progressed, common land was fenced off and the traditional Gypsy ways disappeared. Eventually Maggie became a house-dweller and tried to settle for bricks and mortar, but she never lost her restless spirit, the deep love of the land and the gift for story-telling that were her Romani inheritance.

Maggie's story is one of hardship and prejudice, but also, unforgettably, it recalls the glories of the travelling life in the absolute safety of a loyal and loving family.

Toddlers can count on maths

For babies and toddlers maths is everywhere, and it's not just about counting. As a parent or grandparent you can help young children discover the concepts naturally and easily so that they have a sound background when they go to school.

Maths comes into real life all the time. You can help your baby or toddler understand and enjoy it by talking about what you are doing and seeing. Count aloud when you set the table, or collect library books for returning. Count the number of stairs when you go up and down. Talk about the clock face, and the numbers on it, and what the hands mean, as you discuss the time of day and when certain activities will take place. Bake cakes and biscuits together, and explain what the measurements mean. As you are out and about with your child, notice numbers on doors or buses, and real life shapes, such as "Your button is round, like the clock and like the wheel of that car."

As you are doing everyday activities, chat about what you are doing: "Here's one sock, here's the other sock. That's two socks! They're the same." Use words like tall, short, bigger, longer, smaller; or on top, next to, above, below. When your toddler is playing with lego or duplo, show that two 'two-bricks' go together to make a 'four-brick'.

Mealtimes are a great time for bringing in mathematical concepts: "Here are two apples. One for me, and one for you"; "There are four of us, and Grandma is coming to tea so we need five plates"; "We have ten breadsticks here - how many will we each have?"; "One more for you, and one more...". Show that if you have two bananas and eat one, you have one left. Cut an apple to show that two halves make a whole, or that two quarters make a half.

Mathematics is a gradual discovery and awakening for children, part of the world they are beginning to explore, and you can play a big part in helping your young child understand and enjoy it. JM

A CAN do attitude

On the top floor of a building in Rope Walk is the unlikely base for a hive of activity - Bideford's own 'Community Arts Network' (CAN for short), run by Athos and Mary, two local arts enthusiasts.

The organisation serves to promote involvement in the arts among children and young people, through a range of activities- perhaps the best known being local samba band Samba Sol, which Athos told me is for pretty much anyone aged eight and above. As a whole, the organisation currently serves anyone from about age four to nearly thirty.

It also runs youth clubs during the week and the annual play day at Victoria Park, which this year saw the contribution of talented young musicians, including the Bideford College Glee Club, and Twisted Pistols (pictured). Also successful is the CAN Youth Theatre-which last year performed their self written 'Wicked Sisters' at the Landmark Theatre. Mary said that in encouraging children to come up with their own material and perform it, they have seen their self esteem and confidence develop. They also had the opportunity to learn sound and lighting skills, something they would probably have not been able to do otherwise.

"Children and the Arts are really important- there's little opportunity for such creativity at school," she said. "Not everybody is academic or sporty, kids can be great at all sorts of different things."

This is reflected in their after school clubs- far from simply a child-minding service, the children are encouraged to be imaginative, with various creative activities, even including video production.

And this is the thing that makes CAN stand out from the crowd of such organisations. It isn't run as a charity- and as such is completely self sufficient. Their funding comes from the after school clubs they run, and reinvesting income made from other projects. Therefore it is free from any reliance on government funding, which, especially today, is never consistent. The technical term is a 'Community Interest Company'- meaning that, although it is run as a business, its assets and profits are tied to the community, and can never be used for personal benefit.

Regardless of this, CAN is clearly charitable- in the true sense of the word- at heart. In fact, I believe that the very decision to run the organisation in this way shows that Athos and Mary are passionate about the people they serve- putting in countless hours per week between them to ensure its success so that they can continue to serve them.

Being an arts organisation makes it even more unique- and Athos expressed his disdain for the way organisations are funded based on trends, citing sport as one example.

"A lot of funding was put into youth sport projects, because of concerns about young people's health. But when the funding goes, the projects go, leaving the kids out on a limb. You can't do that to children."

Mary agreed: "There's an old African proverb- 'It takes a village to raise a child'- and we see lots of the children we saw years ago come back and volunteer when they're older. Sometimes we even see their children!" This, then, is an organisation with deep roots in the community.

Despite the economic downturn, Athos and Mary continue to have aspirations for the future- including plans to restart children's cinema nights, form a dance troupe to accompany Samba Sol, and a service to provide respite care for disabled children.

They are also looking for new premises- as the organisation is outgrowing their current building, which is not accessible for disabled people.

"If anyone knows of anywhere suitable, we'll jump at the chance to have a look," Athos said. Some grateful parents have already pledged their financial backing for a new base.

More information about CAN is available at their website, www.canplay.co.uk, by calling 01237 471972, or by visiting them at 13 Rope Walk. Tom Collins

Quakers

The Religious Society of Friends

www.quaker.org.uk

Who are the Quakers and what do they stand for?

To mark 'Quaker Week', I brightly suggested that it would be a good idea to publish a brief article in 'The Buzz' (editor permitting), giving an outline of who Quakers are and what characterises them as a 'religious' group. It was only when I began to reflect on the task ahead that I realised what a challenge I had set myself! A bit like answering one of those classic exam questions: 'summarise in two paragraphs the meaning of life, the universe and everything!' However, nothing ventured, nothing gained, so here goes!

Quakers are also known as 'The Religious Society of Friends'. Creeds and specific forms of worship are not for them - it's not what you say you believe that matters, but rather your spiritual journey, the living out of that Truth discovered in inner communion with The Divine and which is beyond the power words to express.

Crucially, they believe that each one of us can have direct access to The Divine, to God, without the need of an intermediary such as a minister or a priest. For that reason, their Sunday Hour of Worship involves sitting together in silence; anyone who feels moved to do so can, at any point during that hour, stand up and speak. That 'speaking' is known as 'ministry'. There is a short time at the end of the hour when the 'Clerk of the Meeting' invites those present to share any developing ministry that was in their mind during the hour of worship, any 'afterthoughts'. There are then 'notices' and a time for refreshments and chatting together.

In terms of 'how' they live, Quakers will tell you that there are certain crucial guiding principles, known as 'testimonies'. These are:

- The Truth Testimony : never intentionally misleading another.
- The Peace Testimony : working actively for peace and living in a way that does not provoke violence. Many Quakers refuse to take part in war or the preparation for it.
- The Testimony of Simplicity : more difficult to summarise, but, essentially, ruling out excess in any part of life. Sustainability, in the 'green' context, is typical of the Quakers' approach to living.
- Equality : Each one of us, no matter what our circumstances of birth or our status, is an equally precious, unique 'child of God'. One of the dictums among Quakers is : 'There is that of God in everyone.'

These testimonies are derived directly from the Teaching of Christ. Indeed, the recognised founder of Quakerism, George Fox, never intended to form a new denomination; he was trying, rather, to take belief and believers back to the original and pure form of Christianity.

Quakerism has evolved since its beginnings in the 17th century. One of its characteristics is a tolerance of other approaches to the Divine and other pathways, besides the Christian one, to reaching God. For this reason, you will find those who do not necessarily profess Christianity amongst its members alongside those who, like myself, very much do.

If any of the above has been of interest to you, why not come along and find out a bit more about us. We meet together at 10.30 a.m. on Sunday Mornings at the Meeting House, in Honestone Street.

News from the Burton Art Gallery

An exhibition of the paintings of a local artist, Tony Williams, SWAC begins on the 9th October, entitled 'A Landscape Journey', in which he encapsulates the effect of light, mist and atmosphere. He catches the sun striking a landscape; reflections and dappled water droplets; rivers, estuaries and all things maritime interest him, and living in Devon gives him plenty of subject matter for his art. He is a South West Academician, and exhibits widely. He is giving a 'Talk and Tour' of his exhibition on the 9th October, at 2.00 p.m. (Free), and is also holding a Workshop, 'Exploring Oils with Tony Williams' on 6th November. This is a day course, from 10am to 4pm, and costs £30. At the Workshop you may expand your oil painting skills, and explore techniques. To book, please phone 01237 471455.

Re the mystery photo that Barry Hughes asks about on page 10 of last month's 'Buzz'. It was printed to illustrate a newspaper article on January 24 1933 (possibly in the Gazette) although the story goes back to February 1932 when an inspection via trial pits by the county council Roads Committee revealed that the river wall at New Road was unstable and needed urgent work. Various schemes were put forward which cost between £38,000 and £52,500. This was considered to be too expensive and it was suggested that 'a tipped stone embankment faced with stone pitching' could be constructed against the existing wall for just £3000. This cheaper scheme was eventually carried out some eleven months later and the picture shows two of the county steam lorries dumping some 6000 tons of stone from Beam quarry. The article with the photo pointed out the urgent need for further widening of the road as numerous collisions along New Road had been recorded and pedestrians were often in danger as the pavement was just 3 feet wide. This is the story behind the photo – but does anyone have a copy of the original shot as I would love to use it in my next book.

Maya exhibition

I am busy working on an exhibition on the Maya of Central America Centre due to be shown at the Plough Arts in January 2011, The Maya will have significant media attention, especially during 2012, because their ancient calendar is due to expire in December of that year. Hollywood has already picked up on it and other forms of popular culture will no doubt follow. This is a chance to see and listen to the Maya from their own voices and stories. If you would like to support the exhibition please let Buzz know, or sign my letter in Bideford library.

Scout 70th anniversary celebration

On the 9th October, Bideford Scout Group, set up in 1940, will be celebrating its 70th anniversary. A sub-committee is planning an exhibition in our Market Place headquarters of a display of old Scouting photographs, badges, uniform and other memorabilia.

There is to be an official opening at 3pm in the presence of the Mayor and Mayoress of Bideford Scouting commenced in Bideford in 1909 just after Baden-Powell's experimental camp on Brownsea island. Indeed we are in possession of artefacts dating from 1911. Through your columns we would like to make contact with former members and also inform other interested people of our planned exhibition. It is felt that some will be in communication with former members of 2nd Bideford Scout Group, now living away.

Any details of people who wish to be contacted should be given to JG Wood Tel 473094 or myself on 473082. Any help will be greatly appreciated.

Bideford Railway

This was built in October 1855.

On its first opening day the train brought 4000 people to the town.

In 1862 it became part of the London and South Railway. There were five trains a day to Bideford and Exeter. The line was joined up to Torrington in 1862. The new station was built behind the Royal hotel.

People stopped using the trains and went by car, bus and lorries in the early 1960s. The Beeching report of 1963 recommended that the railway line closed because it was not making any money. The last passenger train went from Barnstaple to Torrington in October 1965. The use of the line to carry goods such as clay, milk and fertiliser stopped in September 1982.

Bideford had one other railway going to Westward Ho! and Appledore. It opened in April 1901 and closed in 1917.

The Tarka Trail is now for people to walk on and go cycling in the summer breaks.

Gruesome Facts

An unusual claim to fame that Bideford has is that it is the home of the last women to be found guilty of witchcraft in England. They were Susanna Edwards, Temperance Lloyd and Mary Trembles.

16 skeletons were found on the site of the present library in 1904. This shows an earlier burial ground. Other skeletons were found up near where I live in East the Water.

In 1843 13 boys aged from 10 to 15 were put in the stocks for throwing stones. In 1828 two thieves were whipped around the town.

People were taken to Virginia and Maryland in America and Australia as punishment for stealing things. Jane Willis stole an umbrella; she was 17 years old. She was sent to Australia for ten years in 1841. Joseph Beer was a sheep rustler. He was sent to Australia for 14 years in 1842.

We know how much Bideford loves dressing up so the theme is Halloween Fancy Dress, or you could come in Masquerade Ball attire. A prize will be given for the best dressed. Police and Neighbourhood watch -a winning team Devon and Cornwall is the fourth safest place in the country to live according to Home Office figures. Within the two counties North Devon police are the best performing police area and are the envy of the rest of the constabulary. In our area we have an energetic and committed police service ably assisted by a strong neighbourhood watch presence.

By living in an area with an NHW scheme figures show that you have a 70% less chance of being a victim of crime. Fear of crime in our area is far worse than the actual crime committed. In Devon and Cornwall crime fell by 9,520 incidents in 2009/10, a drop of 9.3% on the previous year. Vehicle crime fell by 16.4%. burglary by 16.5% and criminal damage was down by 15.4% or 4000 offences.

Burglaries involving dwellings are quite rare as most burglaries take place in sheds,garages,business premises and unoccupied buildings. Most crimes committed in our area are 'opportunist' crimes where buildings or vehicles are left insecure and unattended. Crime figures would drop still further if everyone was more vigilant and careful in securing their premises and vehicles when leaving them unoccupied

Cemetery Junction (DVD)

Written and directed by Ricky Gervais and Steven Merchant, with lots of familiar names in the cast, ie. Ricky himself and Ralph Fiennes. Set in the 1970s. this is a moving but funny film about three friends who dream of breaking free from the mundane world of Cemetery Junction. Accompanied by a great 70s soundtrack.

Centurion (DVD)

Set in 117AD and tells the tale of the confrontation between the Picts and the Romans, and a Roman soldier's struggle to keep his small platoon alive. Rather violent and bloody in parts, but worth seeing if you are interest in this period of time. You'll either love it or hate it!

Fire: the Jimi Hendrix Collection (CD)

If you are a die hard Hendrix fan, you probably won't need a Hendrix "best of" cd, because you will already have them all. But if you are new to him, this is definitely one to listen to. All the greats are here covering his all too-short recording career from 1966-69. Listen and be amazed.

Megson: The Longshot

Debbie and Stu Hanna, better known as Megson, are the most original duo on the British folk scene. This album doesn't disappoint. A great selection of songs.MP

Green Bean Chutney (courtesy of Bideford Country Market)

Allow to cool and put into sterilised jars.

Family History

Hello again and welcome to the Family History section. Here are a few more oddities from Parish Registers around the country.

From St. Nicholas, Co. Durham 1868. A memo that 'a certaine Italian brought to the cittie of Durham, the 11th day of June, in the yeare above sayd, a very strange and monstrous serpent, in length sixteene feete, in quantitie and dimensions greater than a great horse; which was taken and killed by speciall pollicie in Ethiopia, within the Turks dominions. But before it was killed, it had devoured (as is credibly thought) more than 1000 persons and destroyed a whole country.' No wonder it was as big as described on those meals !!!!

Lanchester, Durham. George Baker, Esqr (who died at Bristol 1 June). Bur. 12 June 1723. A long way to take a corpse for burial. So do not forget to check your county strays !!

Conscliff, Durham. 'Margaret, the wife of Peter Robinson, of nether Coniscliffe, bur. 20th Aug. 1676, whose eyes beinge blinde, God Almighty opened agaene before her death. Glory be to God in the highest !'

Norton, Durham. The heart and bowels of the right honourable James Earl of Weemys, bur. 22 March 1756. The remains were buried with his ancestors at Weemys Castle in Scotland, the 8th day of April. This ghoulish practice was not uncommon amongst the ruling classes. My how our spelling has improved since these days!!!

The next meeting of the Devon Family History Society, Bideford Group, will be on Saturday 16th October, 2-4pm at the Burton Art Museum. All are welcome and the speaker this month will be Peter Christie a local historian and author who will be covering the subjects of Illegitimacy and the Land Tax, another often forgotten source of information.

There will be a Family History day at Arlington Court on 24th October. Any queries of requests then please contact me Len Collum on 01237 472883.

Smells for every day

On Monday there's a sudsy smell,
Like soap and boiling clothes.
On Tuesday there's a scorchy smell
From ironing I suppose
On Wednesday there's a smell of bread with little loaves for me.
O Thursday it smells very good when Mother gets the tea.
On Friday there's a smell of dust and polish for the floor.
Besides the stuff they use to shine
the handles of the door.

On Saturday the smells are fine for that's the day we bake all sorts of bread and pies and things and gingerbread cakes.
But Sunday has the strangest smells, Sometimes it's like the pews,
and sometimes like the blacking on Brother Harold's shoes.
It makes you feel so very still,
the Sunday smell -and good-you wouldn't run or climb a tree even if you could.
So every day has got a smell, some good ones and some not.
The world is full of funny things,
and you can learn a lot.

Madam Marie' the society lady palmist and Professor Swallow, well known phrenologist, are now on a visit to Bideford

The great open show of poultry, pigeons, cage birds, rabbits, cats and covies, promoted by local fanciers, takes place at Bideford pannier market on Thursday

The trial of 'Dr, Crippen' for the murder of his wife has concluded and he has been sentenced to death. His companion Miss le Neve was found 'not guilty' and discharged.

A midsummer night skydive through the stars

With my eyes half open I dived into the crystal clear stream
as I entered life's wonderful dream
From a multicoloured waterfall through a gateway in the sky
a thousand feet tall
In the past I have sunk to the bottom
now I have no FEAR, bad memories, I've forgotten them
I am floating to the top swimming FREE, I don't want to stop Drifting with the summer breeze
I AM at peace, my minds at ease Washed clean on the ANGEL isle heading straight on the golden mile Walking through the fields of gold a real life dream is now being told I'm on top of the world a mountain HIGH a free soul, a free spirit in the sky and EVERY morning, my happiness I can't disguise
I am wide AWAKE with tears of joy in my green and human eyes.
